This is one of the most comfortable rain jackets I have ever worn. The inside material is soft, the whole jacket has some stretch to it, and it's impressive breathing-I don't start sweating within two minutes of putting it on. Some rain jackets get wet if they get too wet, but this one doesn't. It repels water so well, rain drops literally just roll right off. In addition, it is completely reversible. The inside is solid-colored and looks like a regular zip-up hoodie, making it the perfect jacket for a commuter (hi) who must be prepared for any kind of weather. — Amy Marturana, assistant fitness editorBuy it: $150, columbia.com Community I get from this functional training class is amazing. Classes change every week, but every studio around the world does the exact same class-I'm not kidding, look at their website! I love that I can go to my class in Williamsburg, Brooklyn, then come to the office and talk about it with my co-worker who goes to another location. I go four to five times a week. It is so committed I am to this class! —Kenny Thapoung, associate director of audience developmentBuy it: Prices vary by studio, f45training.comThis new box from Olive & June is the definition of bang for your buck—I can't express how much money I'm going to save now that I have a fun reason not to get my nails done. The box set comes with everything you could possibly need to make your nails look salon-level-polish, top coat, a buffer, clipper, remover, file, cuticle serum, and even a clean-up brush. It all of a sudden makes making your own nails as fun as it was when you were 5 years old—it literally gives me the joy that arts-and-crafts once did, where you can sit down, be creative, and take a second. All these products are originals of Olive & June-my favorite nail salon in LA (come to NYC, please!) —which is also a female-based small business. The icing on the tone of this box is Poppy, Olive & June's first original product (they've rolled out all of these in the last month), a patented little gadget that you pop on top of any nail polish bottle to make the painting with your non-dominant hand easier. Very, highly recommend. — Hannah Pasternak, senior editor, emerging platformsBuy it: $50 (originally $69), olivejune.comIf you're something like me and love loungewear, I highly recommend keeping Saint Haven on your radar. The brand creates everyday essentials for women and children in the softest fabrics, so they are great for people with sensitive skin. — Talia Abbas, editorial assistantBuy it: $68, sainthaven.com June 29, 2005 11 min read Opinions expressed by Entrepreneur Contributors are their own. Editor's Note: This article is excerpted from 202 things you can buy and sell for big profits from Entrepreneur Press. A buying and selling company is nothing more than buying cheap new or previously owned products that we need, use or want and sell these same items for more than cost. The difference between what you paid and and you sold it for, of course, your profit. The mantra for every buy-and-sell business is simple, and easily memorized: Buy low, sell high. That's the very purpose of this book—to show you how you can start and run your own independent buy-and-sell business so you can buy low and sell high, and make a bundle profit in the process. Buying and selling for profit is nothing new. It has been around for thousands of years; the only difference is that the currency has gone from goats and bread to paper and plastic. That said, however, there are two primary reasons why buying and selling has recently exploded from being the closely guarded secret of a few, to the popular occupation of hundreds of thousands of people worldwide, who now buy and sell as their only source of income. The first reason is the advent, wide acceptance and use of the Internet, and the second reason is what I call the new economy. The Internet makes it easy to buy and sell the spread of the Internet giving entrepreneurs from every walk of life and from every geographic location access to a global audience to buy consumers, eager sellers, information and resources that in no other time in history. The internet has not only made it easier to sell products to the global market using online sales venues like eBay, e-commerce websites, e-job ads, and e-shop windows, but also source an almost limitless number of in-demand products, which can be purchased cheaply from domestic and foreign vendors and resold for a beautiful profit. When this task was out of reach for most small business owners because of the time and money required to research and often travel to foreign and domestic product suppliers to inspect, negotiate and ink a contract. Much of this has changed. Now with the simple click of a mouse, you can buy products cheaply from thousands of vendors spanning the globe, and sell these same products all over the world through numerous online marketplaces, or locally through community retail opportunities like your weekend flea market—all for incredible profits. The new economy is buying and selling the new global market has also created a second reason why buying and selling is not only the wave of the future, but also likely to become a big part of what constitutes the new economy of industrialized nations like the United States and Canada. It's no secret that manufacturing, technology and middle management jobs continue to disappear daily, engulfed by overseas economies with cheaper labor, crude and production costs. In fact, some studies suggest that job drain in these areas is happening at an alarming rate, faster than most people, including politicians and policymakers, are aware of or care to admit. Call centers in India, furniture manufacturing in Indonesia and chemical processing in China. The resulting fallout in North America is a dramatic increase in the number of Start-ups. Many people who have been or will soon be affected by the new global economy have chosen self-employment as a way to keep in tune with changing times, make money, and secure their long-term future. History has taught us to evolve or end up like the dinosaurs extinct! The benefits of a Buy-and-Sell Enterprise When you consider the benefits of a buy-and-sell business over traditional retail or service provider companies, it quickly becomes apparent why many people have wisely chosen to buy and sell, and why buying and selling will make up a large percentage of new business startups and the new economy. Consider some of these reasons. Low investment. The vast majority of buy-and-sell companies require only a minimal investment to start. Most require under $2,000, including inventory. Minimal financial risk. Since almost all the money you spend to get started goes into buying inventory, there is limited financial risk involved. If you decide to quit, you can simply sell off stocks, make up for all or most of your investments, and live to fight another day. Incredible winning potential. As mentioned in the introduction, a 15-year-old high school student earning $5,000 a month part-time selling vintage T-shirts! Of course, the profit potential is excellent. Work from home. For people who want to work from home, a buy-and-sell venture is a great choice, as most can largely be operated and managed from home. Flexibility. No other business opportunity or career choice offers as much flexibility as buying and selling, especially if you concentrate on online sales. Part-time, full-time, seasonally or sometimes, you set your own schedule and level of commitment determined by your goals and goals, not your boss's. Minimal skill requirements. With the exception of some specialized products such as real estate and antiques, there are few skill requirements needed to start, operate and flourish in a buy-and-sell business, and the skills needed can be mastered by novice entrepreneurs over time. This is a rare opportunity where ambition and motivation are more important than special skills. Tax advantages. Running a legal buy-and-sell business has many tax advantages and depreciation companies, which will leave more money in your pocket and less in Uncle Sam's. Who can buy and sell? The answer is simple-anyone. One of the best aspects about starting and running a buy-and-sell venture is that everyone is qualified. Buying and selling knows no bounds—someone with a need or desire to earn extra money, work from home or to start and own a business can buy and sell, regardless of age, experience, education, and financial resources. This is perhaps what makes buying and selling the ultimate self-employment option for the vast majority of people: it is cheap, simple, fast and proven to work and generate huge profits. Imagine the offered by purchases and sales. You can buy and sell part-time to pay Debt. You can buy and sell full time to replace your current income and in all likelihood earn more. You can buy and sell seasonally, allowing you to pursue other interests like travel. Or you can buy and sell to supplement your retirement income and be active in your golden years. Need any ideas on just what products have to buy/sell potential? Here are five products that work well in this arena. Antiques The potential to take advantage of buying and selling antiques is as great as the potential to lose money. Replicas, paying too much and buying items in poor condition are just three of the dangers you need to hone your skills and skills to protect yourself against if you decide to buy and sell antiques. But those who take the time required to become ancient experts are usually rewarded with great profits and gratifying work. Antiques are a broad subject, so choose an area where to specialize-furniture, art, yard utensils or architectural antiques. The best places to dig up antique treasures include garage sales, auctions, property sales and advertising placed by private sellers in the classified. Secondary buying sources will include flea markets, secondhand stores and online marketplaces. Always take along your antiques-hunter toolbox, which should include antique value guides, camera, flashlight, magnifying glass, angled mirror and tape measure. The best way to sell for top dollar is directly to collectors through clubs, associations and shows. Next to sell to collectors, list on eBay and online antique buy-and-sell marketplaces, sell at flea markets, and sell directly from a home showroom supported by local advertising. Buy: Auctions, Flea Markets, Garage Sales, Estate Sales, Classifiedsellers: Collectors, B2B, Auctions, Homebased Sales, eBay, Flea Markets Resources: Used and Rare Books You have the potential to hit the jackpot if you specialize in rare books such as first editions, antique and author-signed copies. There are an infinite number of used books available at rock bottom prices. You can buy them at garage sales, flea markets, online marketplaces, auctions, property sales, library sales and secondhand stores. Better yet, few people take the time to find out the true value of the books they sell, and because of this, many rare and valuable books can be purchased in the process. For example, you can stumble upon a first edition copy of The Old Man and the Sea, by Ernest Hemingway and buy it for far less than $600 to $1,000 it's currently worth to a collector. You will want to invest in rare-book pricing guides so that you are armed with the resources needed to make wise buying decisions. Whether the books you sell are run-of-the-mill used books for $10 or rare ones worth hundreds, the internet is your best marketing tool. List books for sale on Amazon, and any number of the used and collectors book marketplaces online. In addition, if you plan on volume sales, be sure to invest in barcode barcode software like Scanner Pal , which automatically scans all book information retrieved from the barcode for easy listing. Buy: Garage Sales, Online Marketplaces, Flea Markets, Secondhand Stores Sell: eBay, Collectors, Flea Markets, Online Marketplaces, Amazon Resources: Golf Clubs Golf ranks as one of the most popular sports and leisure pastimes in North America, and you can make a bundle by selling new and used golf clubs and equipment. If you have some mechanical aptitude, you can dramatically increase profits by buying golf club components (heads, axes and grips) wholesale, and assembling the clubs at home to meet your customers' individual needs. That is, you build custom clubs. Or if you are not the practical type, then you can buy pre-assembled new clubs from wholesalers and manufacturers. Used golf clubs and accessories such as bags, electric carts and pull-carts can be purchased at flea markets, garage sales, online golf portals, auction sale and property sales. New and used clubs and accessories can be sold through eBay, via a homebased showroom supported by local and online advertising, and by exhibiting at golf shows. Buy: Wholesalers, Manufacturers, Classifiedads, Sales Auctions: Homebased Sales, Online Marketplaces, eBay, Golf and Recreation Shows Resources: Cosmetics For the innovative entrepreneur, there are many ways to sell cosmetics and make a bundle. You can enlist contract vendors to organize and host home cosmetics sales parties. You can sell cosmetics in any number of online marketplaces, including eBay. You can establish a customer base through community advertising and direct contact methods like telemarketing and mail, and offer home delivery and consultation sensing much like Mary Kay and Avon. You can rent kiosk space in malls and sell cosmetics on weekends. You can rent vendor space on fashion, health, and beauty shows and sell cosmetics. Or you can combine any or all of these sales methods to maximize sales and profit. The first step to getting started in cosmetics sales is to buy a reliable supply of decent quality cosmetics. You can create your own cosmetics brand and have it manufactured under a private labeling agreement. Or you can reach an agreement with an existing cosmetics manufacturer or distributor and market that line on an exclusive or non-final basis. You may also want to specialize in organic cosmetics products and market to people with skin sensitivity or allergies.
